Purpose of CDS

- CDS is a standard, agreed-to way of asking for information that the CDS publishers already request on their surveys.
- CDS items and definitions created with significant input from the academic community
- CDS items are revised as needed
- CDS results in: better data; reduced data burden
100 items - Approximately

- CDS is not a database
- CDS is a template of items and definitions
- Publishers will accept CDS information various ways:
  - CDS from your college’s website
  - A printed copy of the CDS
  - CDS data on publisher’s own survey
20th year of the initiative

- CDS publishers are open to suggestions and request for CDS changes and new CDS items.
- CDS items are not copyrighted; other publishers and organizations are encouraged to use them – and many do.
Users – at least at one time – of the CDS

- University and College Accountability Network (U-CAN)
- Voluntary System of Accountability (VSA)

How the CDS Publishers Accept the CDS

The Common Data Set publishers:

- The College Board
- U.S. News & World Report
- Peterson’s

All abide by a series of best practices for accepting Common Data Set submissions and encourage other data collectors to follow suit.
How the CDS Publishers Accept the CDS

CDS information accepted in several ways:

1. A paper copy signed and dates by the respondent and mailed directly to the data collector
2. A file (doc, rtf, pdf, xls, html) with an electronic signature emailed directly to the data collector
3. A downloadable file (doc, rtf, pdf, xls, html) posted on the institution’s website; college alerts publisher to the Web address via an email featuring an electronic signature
4. An online survey record updated and officially submitted by the respondent into publisher’s online data entry system
How the CDS Publishers Accept Non-CDS Items

1. Responses to non-CDS items (i.e., data collectors’ proprietary questions) need to be submitted via data collectors’ online survey collection process.

2. Each publisher has some non-CDS questions on its surveys and those questions are very important to the products that each publisher produces.
CDS Advisory Board – Seeking New Higher Ed Org. Members

- The development of the CDS has been a collaborative process.
- The CDS publishers have worked closely with higher education organizations representing the interests and expertise of their constituencies.
- The CDS Advisory Board plays key role in those collaborative efforts.
- CDS Publishers are seeking new members to the CDS Advisory Board who want to play an active role in developing and evolving the CDS.
- If your higher education group is interested in joining and becoming an active member on the CDS Advisory Board, then contact one of the CDS publishers giving this presentation today.

Key points in CDS 2015-16 Proposed Changes to Cumulative Debt Questions

Section H Cumulative Debt at Graduation Questions currently H4 and H5:

Add the following questions:

- Number in graduating class and number of graduates who borrowed each type of student loan
- Add detailed questions on three types of non-federal loans: state, institutional, private

Why this data is currently available:

Colleges are already instructed to define these groups and report non-federal borrowing for the existing CDS questions. So assuming colleges are answering the questions correctly and comprehensively and accurately the data will be available to report externally
